Red Bank Catholic Safely Adapts to COVID-19

by Julia Shaffer

The Red Bank Catholic Casey family returned for full in person learning on September 14, 2020 after six months of being remote. Several precautions have been taken by the faculty and students to ensure everyone is safe and can have a successful in-person school year.

To start the day a daily COVID-19 screening form is due by 7am to ensure safety before students even enter the school. Random temperature checks are done by every entrance as students come into the building.

Every classroom is stocked with hand sanitizer and disinfectant spray which is sprayed on each desk before class, and is to be wiped off by the students upon arrival.

Staircases have been set to one way directions to reduce exposure. Each teacher is required to record a seating chart daily in the event contact tracing is necessary. The cafeteria has limited lunch tables to six people per table, and protective shields have been installed between students.

Several new technologies and advancements have been added to the classrooms to elevate the learning of students who have chosen to remain in a remote learning experience. The Owl and Yeti microphones have been added to classrooms to give students the full in school experience from home.

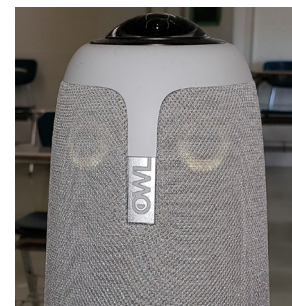

Students at home are projected on the white boards and the Owl allows them to see the students in class to make it feel as though they are with their classmates in person. The Yeti microphones ensure that students not only hear the teacher speaking, but also hear their classmates, so that they can be a part of the class discussions from home.

These efforts by the administration and faculty, with student cooperation, have proven to be successful and effective.

Thanks to everyone for abiding by the new protocol and COVID-19 guidelines, we will continue to see each other more frequently for in person learning.

Everyone, please continue to wear your masks and stay safe.

The Owl has proven a useful tool for virtual students and teachers.

2020 Presidential Election

by Julia Shaffer

Democratic candidate Joe Biden and his running mate, Senator Kamala Harris, defeated Republican Donald Trump and Vice President Mike Pence in the 2020 presidential election.

History was made as Senator Kamala Harris, the first African-American and third female vice presidential nominee, became the United States' first African-American, South-Asian, female vice president.

This election saw the highest voter turnout since 1900, with each candidate receiving more than 74 million votes each. Biden received more than 81 million votes which is the most votes a U.S. presidential candidate has ever received.

Because of the ongoing pandemic, several voters cast their votes early by mail to avoid crowded polling places. As a result of the mail-in ballots, several states had delays in reporting their votes.

It was not until four days after the election that news networks projected the winners of the election. The results of the election were not certified for each state and Washington D.C. until December 9, and the presidential electors formally cast their votes on December 14. Biden and Harris were inaugurated January 20, 2021.

Electoral College

The Electoral College is a process of the meeting of chosen electors to vote for the president and vice president. It consists of 538 electors, and each state is allotted electors based on the number of members a state holds in the House of Representatives, plus two for the number of senators a state has. The District of Columbia is allotted 3 electors and is seen as a state for election purposes.

Electors are chosen by the candidate's political party in each state. Each candidate running for president has their own group of electors known as a slate which is chosen by their political party in each state.

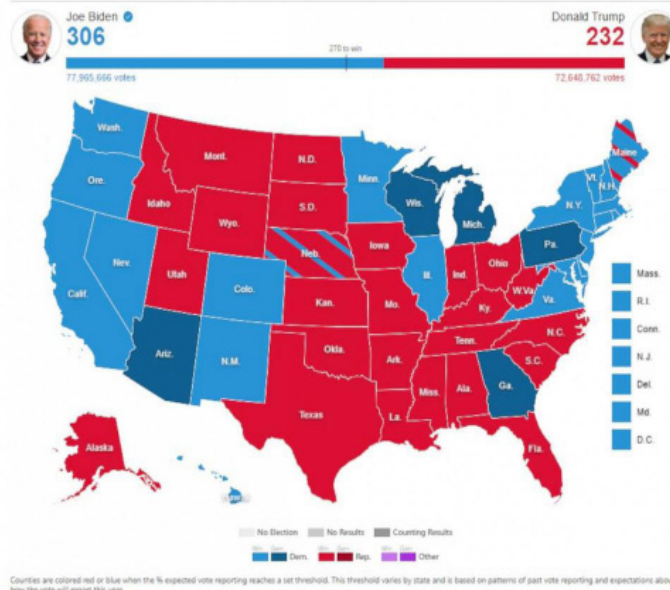

When we vote for a presidential candidate, we are actually voting for our candidate's electors. All states except for Maine and Nebraska give all the state's electoral votes to whichever candidate wins the state's popular vote. Maine and Nebraska, however, have a version of proportional representation.

Every ten years, a population census is taken to ensure representation for each state is fair based on the state's population. When the number of representatives a state holds in the house changes, so does the number of electoral college votes that state holds.

Each state's electoral votes are counted in a joint session of Congress on January 6, and the vice president announces the results. The president-elect takes the oath and is sworn in on January 20, 2021.

This year, despite the shocking incident of insurrection by extremist groups on our nation's Capitol Building on January 6, our joint Congressional representatives still formally counted the votes, with then Vice President Mike Pence announcing the results.

Our Congress showed us that day that our United States democracy must remain a constant in American lives in order for us to maintain the free society that our forefathers envisioned.

Above are the Electoral College results by state. Blue indicates a win for Joe Biden and Red indicates a win for incumbent President Donald Trump.

Who's That Featured Casey (or Caseys?) Two Distinguished Seniors

by Julia Shaffer

Senior Casey's Lindsay Mazzucco and Alex Scaramuzzino participated in this year's Leukemia and Lymphoma Society (LLS) Student of the Year Campaign, which is a six to eight week initiative where teams of students participate in a fundraising challenge to benefit the LLS. Lindsay and Alex raised money by hosting their own fundraisers, including school bake sales, dress down days, and asking local businesses, families, and friends for donations. At the end of the eight week initiative, the Student of the Year Campaign held an event for all participants where the LLS announced the total amount that had been raised by students all over New Jersey. Overall, Lindsay and Alex raised over $14,000. Lindsay says, "We were very excited to be a part of something bigger than us, and fundraise to help others fight for a cure."

Throughout this period Lindsay and Alex learned leadership, communication, marketing, and financing skills that they will take on to the next chapters of their lives.

Alex says, "The Leukemia and Lymphoma Society Student of the Year Campaign wasn't only a chance to raise money for those affected by leukemia, but also to learn important life skills I can apply to every aspect of my life."

Congratulations Lindsay and Alex.

On November 23, 2020, RBC's After School Theater Program performed "A Night of Monologues." The performance took place outside in the RBC parking lot, following COVID protocols.

Christmas Spectacular a Success

by Casey Destefano

The RBC Performing Arts Department and the administration worked diligently to allow the Red Bank Catholic Dance Company and Dance Department to perform their annual Christmas performance this year.

While some guidelines had to be implemented in order for the show to continue, RBC gave a successful performance Sunday December 13, 2020. The remarkable show was a collaboration between the members of the After-School Dance Program, the Dance Department, Dance Company, and After-School Theater.

Although the show was held outdoors, and there was limited space for spectators, the weather was beautiful and, with all the advanced technology we have, parents had the opportunity to watch a live stream of the performance.

The cast performed the entertaining annual "Multiplying Santa" number, where the performers dress as Santa. A couple of other numbers that have been seen before included "Reindeer", "Shoppers", "Jingle Bell Rock", and "Ave Maria," which was also performed at the freshman convocation this fall.

There were some wonderful singers, including Carmen Gemellaro, Shane Kirchner, Afrodite Kholouris, and Grace Allison, serving up renditions of various classic Christmas songs.

At the end of the show, the cast put on a living nativity. The performers portrayed Jesus, Mary, the Angels, and the Kings with the gifts.

Readings and Carols

Under the direction of choir director Ms. Melody Blasenheim, the Red Bank Catholic choir members performed their annual Christmas concert, Readings and Carols, a beautiful compilation of Christmas songs, both religious and classic.

This year's show was done virtually, but still maintained the atmosphere of a formal concert. Students sang solo, together as a choir, and even played instruments during the program.

This concert lifted the spirits of all who viewed it, breathing much-needed, magical Christmas cheer for the season.

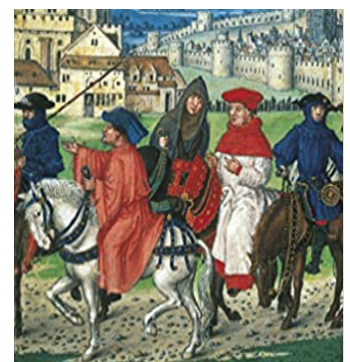

The Christmas Spectacular ended with a beautiful finale portraying a solemn rendition of the Nativity scene, set by Mary's Garden.

Tell-Tale Book Review

by Olivia Morin

One of the most beloved works in the history of English literature, The Canterbury Tales by Geoffrey Chaucer, continues to enthrall all its readers. In this classic, Chaucer details an epic journey through medieval England, in which characters participate in a story-telling contest to pass the time. Tales told by the Knight, the Miller, the Reeve, and the Nun, among others, portray timeless, fascinating fantasies still recounted and enjoyed today. A must read, The Canterbury Tales will captivate the mind from dusk till Chanticleer's crow.

Football Caseys Stand Strong

by Reilly Traynor

Defensive player Dan Brewton prepares to take the field.

The Red Bank Catholic Football Team was faced with many challenges this year.

Between losing senior starters, and faced with COVID troubles, there were many questions to answer this season.

But the football team dealt with these challenges with leadership under the new head coach Michael Lange.

"We had to learn a new offense," noted team captain Anthony Boriello. "But I give a lot of credit to the coaches. They developed a great design for the players we had."

With the shortened season, the Caseys played a six game schedule, posting a winning 4-2 record, playing against tough teams, including wins against RFH, Mater Dei, Middletown North, and Long Branch.

The Caseys were led on offense by seniors Anthony Boriello, Luke Guidetti, Mike O'Connor, and on defense, by seniors Jake Louro and Dan Brewton.
